

World authorities set to lead The Recovery Summit

Three Nobel Laureates, Olympians and Paralympians, economists and activists among 75 speakers who will offer thought-leadership on how to survive and thrive.

Nobel Laureates, Olympians and Paralympians, economists, activists and TV presenters are just some of the people who will take part in The Recovery Summit from Monday 15 to Friday 19 June, a virtual event where they will share their thinking on the global economy, leadership, managing change, innovation, disruption and resilience to help businesses and individuals plan for the post-pandemic future.

More than 75 of the world's leading authorities will take part in talks and interviews at The Recovery Summit, which includes individual talks, interviews and panel discussions. It is expected that over the five days, thousands of people around the world will hear inspiring messages of hope and on overcoming seemingly insurmountable obstacles.

Presentations and interviews with experienced TV news presenters will cover the latest thinking on the future of business and the strategies needed to survive and thrive. Some of the highlights include a one-of-a-kind exclusive discussion on the future of football with former-referee Pierluigi Collina and former CEO of the FA Martin Glenn, and a rare opportunity to hear Nobel Laureates Prof. Paul Romer and Prof. Joseph Stiglitz in discussion together in a debate called Speeding up the long, slow recovery.

Among those taking part include high profile names such as:

Prof. Joseph Stiglitz – Nobel Laureate, ex Chief Economist at World Bank

Prof. Paul Romer – Nobel Laureate, ex Chief Economist at World Bank

Prof. Andrés Velasco – Dean of London School of Economics, former G20 member

Prof. Muhammad Yunus – Nobel Peace Prize, Grameen Bank

Jacques Attali – economist and social theorist, advisor to French presidents

Ingrid Betancourt – anti-corruption activist who spent six years in captivity

Dr Moisés Naím – international columnist, expert on global politics

Pierluigi Collina – FIFA Referee’s Chairman, six times referee of the year

Jim Hagemann Snabe – co-author of Dreams and Details, ex CEO of SAP

Lord Sebastian Coe – President of World Athletics, Olympic Gold medallist

David Coulthard MBE – former British Formula 1 racing driver

The Recovery Summit covers 12 different themes including leadership – in and out of crisis, resilience and dealing with adversity, disruption and transformation, culture, communication in a crisis, the global economy, business growth and culture as well as how to adapt to the changes a new normal will pose.

It is aimed at those people who would like to discover the strategies, mindsets and practices to lead themselves, their teams or organisations through lockdown and recession to recovery and growth. Some of the highlights include The Speed To Change – Insights From Formula 1, Habit Hacks For The New Normal, Achieving The Impossible, Find Your COVID-19 Superpower, Responsible Business In A Time Of Crisis, Digital Body Language and Aftershocks and Opportunities – Scenarios for a Post-Pandemic World.

The Recovery Summit was conceived, curated and coordinated by Cosimo Turroturro, Esther Nelson and Patrick Nelson of Speakers Associates, a global speaker bureau serving some of the world’s most successful organisations.

“Since the beginning of 2020, the lives and routines of billions of people across the world have changed at breath taking speed and we've seen the global economy shut down almost completely." Patrick Nelson

"We created The Recovery Summit in response to this – an online event that will cut through the current flow of the news about the crisis, the shutdown and the problems, and instead provide businesses, corporations and governments with practical strategies, mindsets and tools to move forward."

Cosimo Turroturro, CEO of Speakers Associates and curator of the summit speakers said: "The Recovery Summit is the largest and most ambitious event of its kind since the pandemic hit. Never before has a global audience been able to have live access to such esteemed speakers. We hope as many people as possible will join us for this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to hear this unique collection of the world's most authoritative thinkers share their years of experience, strength and strategies."

Tickets for live broadcasts and replays are free at The Recovery Summit website where an All Access Lifetime Pass can also be purchased at an early bird price of £197.
